Lung Cancer: Screening & Prevention

Early detection, by low-dose CT screening, can decrease lung cancer mortality by 14 to 20 percent among high-risk populations.

About 8 million Americans qualify as high risk for lung cancer and are recommended to receive annual screening with low-dose CT scans.

If half of these high risk individuals were screened, over 12,000 lung cancer deaths could be prevented.